NO COURTS

TODAY ON ACCOUNT OF THE CITY ELECTIONS.

Tomorrow the Case of Elmer Townsend Comes Up in the Circuit Court.

On account of the election today, no court was held by Police Judge D. L. Sanders or Circuit Judge Wm. Reed.

The police docket is rather heavy, several important cases being continued from yesterday to Wednesday and it will also mean a rush of business in circuit court tomorrow.

Among the important cases set for tomorrow in circuit court are: Elmer Townsend against Col. Noel Gaines for $10,000 for alleged false arrest at the encampment this summer. A. N. Sears, administrator, against the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket company for $15,000 damages for the loss of J. W. Moore's life. Moore fell into a vat and was scalded to death.

SERIOUS CHARGE

Against a Young Postoffice Clerk at Owensboro.

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 7.—A sensation was created here by the arrest of Henry Morton, one of the best known young men of Owensboro by Deputy United States Marshal Nichols on the charge of removing valuables from letters in the local postoffice, where he has been employed for several years. About two months ago a number of complaints were received from persons who alleged that their letters had been tampered with and money removed from them.

Postoffice inspectors have been at work on the case since the first complaints were received. A warrant was sworn out, but it was not immediately served. It is understood that the inspectors, in order to make the case complete, mailed a decoy letter in the postoffice. When the mail was taken to the train the pouch was opened and the letter examined. It is claimed that the decoy letter had been tampered with. It is said that Morton was the only person who handled it.

The inspectors, confronted Morton with the charges. He broke down at once and is said to have made a written confession. Morton was arraigned before Commissioner Lindsey and waived his examining trial. He was held over to the November term of the federal grand jury in the sum of $1,000. He executed bond, and was released.

Morton is about 27 years of age and has been prominent in Owensboro socially for many years.

MUCH BOTTLING IN BOND

Is Expected to Give Impetus to Whiskey Trade.

"The growth of the bottling in bond business in Kentucky is an interesting and encouraging feature of the whiskey situation," said a prominent whiskey man yesterday.

The prospects are that the distillers of the state will send out more than a million gallons of whiskey in this character of packages during the fiscal year ending June 30 next. Comparison of the amounts bottled in July and August of last year with those of 1905, indicate the great increase in this phase of the business. For July, 1904, there were 34,293 gallons so bottled, while in the corresponding month of this year there were 66,599 gallons. The figures for August were, 1904, 44,251 gallons, and 1905, 75,255 gallons.

Prices at present are abnormally low for Kentucky whiskeys, but the indications are that the crop of 1906 will be considerably restricted and fall several millions short of the output last season. In view of this and other circumstances substantial trading will probably mark the fall business, but prices are likely to be better.

Agent at Ellis Island.

A movement is on foot in Kentucky to have a representative at Ellis Island, New York, to do all possible to induce desirable immigrants to come to Kentucky to locate. Many states have for years followed this plan, and it is said to be most beneficial. The matter is expected to come up at the quarantine and immigration convention at Chattanooga this week, which Secretary Coons of the Commercial club, and Mr. W. P. Hummel, as official representatives of Paducah, expect to attend.

Council Did Not Meet.

The councilmanic board did not meet last night on account of the democratic rally. President Ingram and Councilmen Robkopf and Ochsenschlaeger were absent, and City Clerk Henry Bailey called the board to order. After the roll was called a motion prevailed to adjourn until tomorrow, Wednesday evening.

JIMMIE'S COOK

By EPES W. SARGENT

Copyright, 1905, by Epes W. Sargent.

"Come in," said Jimmie Caswell, a little embarrassed. "You see, the place isn't fixed up very well, but I haven't had any one to attend to things for a week."

"Help is hard to get," admitted Grace Gorham.

"But I'm very lucky," commented Jimmie, regarding the brown hair that peeped under the dainty hat. He always had liked brown.

"Now, about my place," said the girl briskly. "How much do you pay?"

"Four dollars a week," said Jimmie promptly. "I pay you a certain sum for expenses, and you find all material. It's better that way than having to come to me all the time for money."

"But isn't that very little, even for a beginner?" she asked.

"That's the regular price," assured Jimmie. "Four dollars a week and $10 for supplies."

"I never would use all that," she gasped. "I don't suppose you will need more than a couple of dollars a week."

"Oh, yes, you will," declared Jimmie. "The last girl couldn't get along with that, even. She used to touch me for more every Friday regularly; never could imagine what she bought with it."

"She must have been very hard on ribbons," suggested Miss Gorham. "Some girls are. Even at that, she shouldn't use $10 worth."

"What have the ribbons to do with the expense?" asked Jimmie curiously.

"She couldn't spend it for paper," explained Miss Gorham. "You could not possibly use more than a box a week. The ribbons are about all else she had to get."

"Oh, no," he interrupted. "She had to get bread and meat and things like that."

Miss Gorham rose, her face a bright

"As cook," insisted Jimmie firmly.

crimson. "I did not come here to be insulted," she said icily.

"You came to see about a place," he protested.

"As stenographer," she finished.

"As cook," insisted Jimmie firmly.

"I distinctly told them to send up a cook."

"The hall boy said it was three flights up," she went on.

"What has the hall boy to do with it?" he asked curiously. "I never told him I wanted anybody."

For answer, she drew a clipping from her pocketbook. It was an advertisement for a stenographer and gave the house address, but no name.

Jimmie immediately became conscious of his dressing gown. It was all right to talk to cooks in dressing gowns, but a stenographer—and such a pretty one!

"I'm sorry," he said humbly, "but it's the fault of that blame boy. He meant Miss Cartwright across the hall. I believe she writes."

He showed her to the door, but to his surprise she started down the stairs.

"Miss Cartwright is just across the hall—on this landing," he called after her.

"I—I don't think I want the place," she cried, struggling to keep back the tears. "I don't want to work here." And she went her way conscious, even in her anger, that she was rather sorry that Jimmie had not wanted a stenographer. Even in a dressing gown Jimmie was an attractive fellow.

As for Jimmie himself, he kept thinking about the pretty typewriter all the morning, and even the arrival of a well recommended cook brought no solace to his mind.

Even a telephone summons to dine with his favorite aunt did not give the pleasure it usually brought, even when that kindly lady admonished him to be prompt, as she had invited a particularly attractive young woman on his account. "Better get her to run the house for you," she laughed, just as she hung up her receiver, "you have such trouble with servants."

For a moment Jimmie did not recognize her in her filmy dinner dress. He was merely conscious of a vision of loveliness in something soft and green—or blue, it might have been blue. Then a cool, self possessed voice remarked that she had had the pleasure of meeting him before. Jimmie's gaze became a stupor, from which only the announcement of dinner roused him, and he was half way to the dining room before he really realized that the vision of the morning was beside him and was saying something to him. Ashamed to acknowledge that he had not heard, he answered, "Yes," at random, and immediately became aware that he had said the wrong thing.

They were removing the fish plates before he had the courage to seek to penetrate the icy air of reserve in which she had wrapped herself.

"What was it you asked me when I said 'Yes'?" he asked desperately.

"Didn't you understand?" she counter-questioned, unbending a trifle.

"To be perfectly frank," he said honestly, "I never heard a word. I was so surprised to find you here that my head was in a whirl."

"My father has a theory that his daughter should be capable of her self support. I am to have the old home on Madison avenue if I can get and hold a position for three months. This morning was my first application."

"But what was it you asked?" he persisted.

"I asked you if you really thought I looked like a cook," she said, with a little laugh.

"And I said 'Yes,'" he cried contritely. "What a fool you must have taken me for!"

"Then you admit your mistake?" she asked smilingly.

What Jimmie answered was not to the point and wholly unworthy of recital. There are times when even a confirmed bachelor may grow suddenly foolish, and through that dinner Jimmie would have rivalled even a college lad making love to his first widow.

A more important conversation, and one more worthy of record, was held a few weeks later in the Gorham library.

"You see, I am at sea again on the servant question. The girl drank everything in the house that was bottled, even the cooking sherry."

"Why don't you go and live at a hotel?" she said. "Now that you have come into all that money through the sale of your western property, you do not need to keep bachelor hall—ten dollars a week for all material," she quoted.

"I've a better idea than that," he declared seriously. "One my aunt gave me. I think I'll hire a housekeeper."

"What will you pay her?" she demanded, her eyes twinkling at the memory of Jimmie's serious parody on bargaining.

"Love and affection and other valuable considerations, as the legal documents say," he answered promptly.

"And as you were an applicant for a place you shall have first chance—will you, dear?" He had dropped his banter and his voice had become dangerously tender.

"I think I'll have to," she answered shyly. Then with a sudden flash of humor, "If only because you look so forlorn when your rooms have been servantless for a week."

"The blessings of Cupid be upon the mistake," said Jimmie softly. "I think I'll give that hall boy $5, because I kicked him for making you uncomfortable that morning." Which was an eminently practical termination to a proposal by an oddity like Jimmie.

Cured Consumption.

Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him."

That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Alvey & List.

In New Quarters.

The Commercial club and Retail Merchants' Association have moved to the building on South Fourth St., formerly occupied by Attorney J. M. Worten, and are getting settled in their new quarters. H. C. Hoover, who had one of the offices, has moved across the street to the building just vacated by the Commercial club.

Neuralgia Pains.

Rheumatism, lumbago and sciatic pains yield to the penetrating influence of Ballard's Snow Liniment.

It penetrates to the nerves and bone and being absorbed into the blood, its healing properties are conveyed to every part of the body, and effect some wonderful cures. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Alvey & List.

Mrs. Austin's Buckwheat has a world-wide reputation as a cure for genuine buckwheat fever. Don't forget the name.
